44% 被检测为由 AI 生成

该百分比表示可能是由 AI 生成的文本以及可能是由 AI 生成且经过 AI 改写的文本的总量。

注意 需进行审核。

在对学生作业做出评判之前 了解 AI 检测的局限性至关重要。我们鼓励您在使用该工具之前 先详细了解 Turnitin 的 AI 检测功能。

检测分组

 3 纯 AI 生成文本 44%
可能来自大型语言模型的 AI 生成文本。

 0 经 AI 改写的 AI 生成文本 0%
可能是使用 AI 改写工具或词语微调器修订过的 AI 生成文本。

免责声明

我们的 AI 写作评估旨在帮助教育工作者识别可能由生成式 AI 工具准备的文本。我们的 AI 写作评估可能并不总是准确的（即我们的 AI 模型可能会产生误报），因此它不应被用作对学生采取惩罚措施的唯一依据。需要进一步审查和人工判断 并结合组织的具体学术政策应用 来确定是否存在学术不端行为。

常见问题解答

我该如何解读 Turnitin 的 AI 写作百分比和误报情况

AI 写作报告中所显示的百分比 是指提交内容的符合条件的文本中 经 Turnitin 的 AI 写作检测模型判定 可能是由大型语言模型生成的文本 或可能是使用 AI 改写工具或词语微调器修改过的 AI 生成文本的比例。

在 AI 模型中 可能会出现误报（即将人类撰写的文本错误地标记为 AI 生成的文本）的情况。

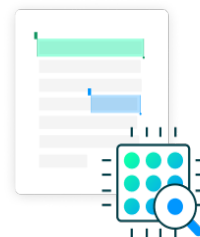

AI 检测分数低于 20% 时（不会在新报告中显示这些分数） 出现误报的可能性更高。为降低错误解读的可能性 报告中不会标注分数或高亮显示相关文本 而是用星号表示 (*%)。

AI 写作百分比不应作为判定是否存在不当行为的唯一依据。审阅者/教师应将该百分比作为与学生展开建设性对话的契机 和/或根据学校政策 用它来审查提交的作业。

“符合条件的文本”是什么意思

我们的模型仅处理长篇写作形式的符合条件的文本。长篇写作是指构成一篇较长书面作品（如论文、学位论文或文章等）的段落中所包含的单个句子。在提交的内容中 被判定为可能是 AI 生成的符合条件的文本将以青色高亮显示 可能是 AI 生成后又被 AI 改写的文本将以紫色高亮显示。

不符合条件的文本 如项目符号列表、注释性参考文献目录等 将不会被处理 这可能会导致提交内容中的高亮显示部分与所显示的百分比之间存在差异。

Personal Statement

I've always been fascinated by the history and culture of China, from the extraordinary traces of Shang dynasty divination to the revolutionary poetry of Lu Xun. It's something I owe to my mother, who has taught Chinese at the high school level her whole life. She taught me to recognize how subtle differences in context and structure can transform the meaning of literary texts, and encouraged me to think critically about how different scholars presented their sources. I read widely, poring over classical and contemporary works, and drew inspiration from China's literary canon to improve my own writing. Now, I want to conduct deeper studies into the origins of China's national and cultural identity. That is why I am applying for your BA program in Chinese and History.

In my high school studies, and throughout my life, I've always tried to be conscientious and well-rounded. Chinese and English were my strongest subjects. In Chinese, I mastered the core methods for parsing classical Chinese sentences, translating texts, and interpreting their content. I also became proficient at analyzing modern literature, using work by Marxist and poststructuralist scholars to analyze form and unpick ideological claims. This, in turn, helped me to understand the craft of writing and think critically about the provenance of texts. When reading the poetry of Tao Yuanming, for example, I was struck by his rejection of courtly values in favour of a simpler morality rooted in rural life. Reading about Tao's frustrations as an imperial civil servant, and his decision to retreat to a comfortable household in the Jiangxi countryside, provided me with rich context that helped me to understand his work – and the many ways in which modern audiences invoke his memory today. I was lucky, too, to benefit from my school's subscription to a Massive Open Online Course platform. This let me continue my studies outside the classroom, engaging with specialized courses taught by experts from around the world.

Learning how to express myself within the confines of an academic essay also helped me to improve my broader communication skills. For several years, I've been running my own media platform, where I create and share short and accessible articles. My first posts focused on literature and society, and were very well received, reaching an average view count of 50,000. Through data analysis, however, I realized that I could aim at even larger audiences. My research into playback data and audience profiles revealed that 70% of readers were also interested in humanities and social topics. On this basis, I adjusted my account positioning to include critical analysis of social issues. I also improved the aesthetics of the platform, including theme-appropriate pictures and selected quotations from classic literature. I eventually achieved a cumulative view count of over 1.35 million. This experience was deeply meaningful to me. It helped me to develop my skills in content planning, topic exploration, copywriting, and the mechanics of social media traffic. At the same time, it also cultivated my critical thinking and analysis skills and gave me a keen understanding of the workings of the modern media.

Studying English, meanwhile, enabled me to familiarize myself with listening, speaking, reading, and writing in a foreign language. In my English classes, I remember taking part in a complex English-language presentation on the topic of “Canadian Culture and Customs”. I decided to speak about the French-speaking region of Quebec, the natural geography of the Rocky Mountains, and the rich food and festival cultures that have emerged from Canada’s diverse immigrant communities. This made my theme more focused and the content more layered, and I received special recognition from my teacher and classmates. I continued this work outside the classroom whenever possible. By watching English-language movies and listening to songs from across the anglophone world, I accumulated rich experience of diverse cultures from the United States to India. I learned to appreciate differences in cultural backgrounds, and the different perspectives they provide. I used these new insights to write some comment articles in English, which cultivated my critical thinking from a cross-cultural perspective.

I’ve also been fortunate enough to take part in a few exchanges to cities in China, namely Chengdu and Chongqing. It was a fantastic opportunity to engage in new cultures: I visited their historical districts, cultural venues and backstreets, conducting research on regional differences, urban history and folk customs. In Chengdu, for example, it was fascinating to hear how local speakers used a Sichuanese form of Mandarin that was less formal and more relaxed than that spoken closer to Beijing. This research broadened my geographical and cultural horizons, and also gave me hands-on experience of research methods like on-site observation, data collection, iteration and report writing. These activities complemented my academic studies, enabling me to move from theoretical knowledge to hands-on practice.

Following in my mother’s footsteps, I’ve always wanted to be a Chinese teacher – preferably in a middle school that specializes in humanistic education. I want to be the sort of teacher who engages deeply with students, who constantly adapts and improves their material according to changing needs, and who creates multi-track lessons to cater to students with different learning styles. This can be an intense and resource-heavy form of teaching, but it’s also the best positioned to help students engage with the complexities of Chinese culture and prepare themselves for rigorous studies at the high school level.

The BA program in Chinese and History at the City University of Hong Kong will help me achieve these goals. The program will provide me with the valuable opportunity to develop my linguistic abilities, alongside analytical and writing skills. I particularly look forward to the course’s opportunities for immersion activities, which will let me carry out the kind of work I found so fascinating in Chongqing and Chengdu in a new context. I also hope to take Dr Gao Yunwen’s courses on modern Chinese literature to see how writers have addressed the rapid changes in contemporary Chinese society. CityUHK also offers a whole host of out-of-study recreational activities, and I look forward to engaging in its dynamic campus life. Through studying the program, I hope to grow as a professional and an academic, but also as a person.
